Presented as part of the Chicago Flamenco Festival 2015.

The Chicago Flamenco Festival 2015 is a collaboration of the Instituto Cervantes, Arte y Vida Chicago, the Museum of Contemporary Art Chicago, Old Town School of Folk Music, and the Flamenco Arts Center. It runs February 6 through March 7, 2015.

The Festival programs span the wide-ranging world of flamenco music, dance, and films. They feature ascending as well as legendary performers. Over five weekends, more than ten distinctive performances take place in different venues, expanding the dedication of the Instituto Cervantes in Chicago to support the presentation of today’s rich array of Spanish and Hispanic culture. For more information visit http://chicago.cervantes.es.

Generous support for MCA Dance is provided by David Herro and Jay Franke.

Sònia Sánchez: Le Ça is made possible by the Program for the Internationalization of Spanish Culture (PICE), under the Mobility grants awarded by the state company Acción Cultural Española (AC/E).

Le Ça started with Sònia Sánchez investigating the sound of shoes and various kinds of wood. At first filtering them using different microphones, she eventually turned from experimentation with recording technologies to the surrounding sounds of a forest in Spain’s Catalunyan region, where she lived in solitude for a time. Discarding everything except techniques for generating sounds from her own feet, palms, fingers, and vocal cords, “as if facing an orchestra that has lost its score,” Sánchez began composing with her body. “The sounds of the forest came in, the sounds of darkness, of pain, of joy, which were my companions for many years.”

Carrying this emotional charge into the studio, Sanchez improvised over five months with a series of collaborators including musicians and dancers of flamenco, jazz, and contemporary forms.

The result is a creative breakthrough in flamenco. By extolling technique and minimal scenery over the expected flourish of ornate costumes and narrative, Le Ça offers live composing for the body through choreographed and improvised tapping, stamping, and vocals, to live electronics and electric guitar.

MCA Stage’s series of artist-centered talks, workshops, and open studios allows the public to engage with artists in intimate settings and provides a closer look at the creative process. Join us today.

Audience members are invited to stay at the end of the performance for a conversation with Sònia Sánchez. Moderated by Yolanda Cesta Cursach, Associate Director of Performance Programs.

MCA Studio: Workshop with Sònia Sánchez
Sat, Feb 14, 1-4pm
Sònia Sánchez teaches flamenco technique grounded in the form, musicality, and rhythm of the body, drawing from her formal training with La China and Butoh master Hisako Horikawa and with attention to her investigation into the sound of flamenco dance. Sánchez trains participants in composing sound with the body and improvisation that fuses flamenco dance and vocal technique with electronics.

About the Artists

completed her academic instruction at the Conservatory of Dance in Madrid, Spain, continuing her training in Barcelona where she was introduced to Butoh, and more specifically the technique of Hisako Horikawa. Born in 1974 in Sabadell, Catalunya’s second largest city, Sánchez has always been rooted in flamenco, studying with the masters Ciro and La China, and collaborating with Antonio Canales, Cristina Hoyos, Albert Pla, Núria Espert, J. M. Cañizares, Alfredo Kraus, Duquende, and Tomatito.

Her exploration of flamenco’s essence and limits has led her to collaborations with various artists outside the form, including Butoh dancer Jordi Mas, trumpeter Julián Sánchez, and electronics composer Joaquim Puigtió. Her free-jazz project, Sai Trio, is an ongoing collaboration with pianist Agustí Fernández (National Prize for Culture; Prize of Barcelona for Music) and the acclaimed jazz drummer Ivo Sans.

Sánchez dance work includes Retales (2007); Rincones y claros de bosques (Edges and clearings of the woods) (2008); and 23 de Mayo (2009). Her solo, El pliegue (2012), toured to Dansmakers Amsterdam and Rencontres Chorégraphiques de Saint Denis. Le Ça premiered March 2014 at Mercat de Les Flors, Barcelona, and has toured to Mexico City, for the FMX International Festival; Dusseldorf, as part of the Flamenco Festival at Tanzhaus; and Paris, for Rencontres Chorégraphiques de Saint Denis. The MCA Stage presentation is its North American premiere.

is a prolific composer and guitarist, and has recorded and performed with avant-pop and jazz bands in Europe and the US for two decades. In addition to contemporary guitarists such as Bill Frisell and Robert Fripp, he cites as his greatest influences the twentieth-century composers Béla Bartók, Olivier Messiaen, and Frank Zappa. The recent release by his own instrumental electro-avant music project, Denga, titled Botanicas, is produced by Lee Townsend, legendary producer of Frisell, Fred Hersch, and many others. The recording features Soler’s collaborators for the past decade: pianist Erik Deutsch, bassist Ben Rubin, and percussionists Borja Barrueta and Marc Pino.

El Londro (Miguel Ángel Soto Peña) is a native of Jerez de la Frontera (Cádiz). He started singing in flamenco groups at the age of twelve and debuted as soloist in the Imperial Theatre of Seville in 1992. In 1994 he was invited by guitarist/director Gerardo Núñez to perform in his production of Amor Brujo at the Seville Biannual, and toured nationally the next year with the company in Núñez’s production of Yerma, directed by Nuria Espert.
El Londro completed his formal training in canto with the national company Nuevo Ballet Español, based in Madrid, as accompanist to classic flamenco dance figures such as Joaquín Grilo, Belén Maya, and Sara Baras and touring with the national company throughout Europe and the US with the productions El Cachorro, directed by Salvador Távora; Torero directed by and featuring choreographer/dancer Antonio Canales; and The House of Bernarda Alba, featuring the bailaora Carmen Cortés. El Londro also tours internationally with leading contemporary flamenco dancers Israel Galván, Andrés Marín, Isabel Bayón, Pastora Galván, Mercedes Ruiz, and Hiniesta Cortés.

He regularly collaborates and tours with flamenco vocal innovators including Miguel Poveda, Enrique Morente, Carmen Linares, Chano Lobato, and Remedios Amaya. He is featured in the recordings Aroma by José Luís Montón, Sendero de lo Imposible by Santiago Lara, Rey by Antonio Rey, Diapasión by Chicuelo, and Corazón de Flamenco which he coproduced with Juan Diego. His newest recording Luna de enero is a project with Miguel Poveda on his label Carta Blanca Records, and produced by the celebrated guitarist Santiago Lara.
