MCA Stage’s series of artist-centered talks, workshops, and open studios engages the public with the artists in intimate settings and provides a closer look at the creative process. Join us today.

FIRST NIGHT
APRIL 29
Audience members are invited to stay following the performance for a Q&A with Kyle Abraham and members of the company.

MCA TALK
APR 30, 1–3 PM
DORCHESTER ART + HOUSING COLLABORATIVE (DA+HC)
1456 EAST 70TH STREET
Kyle Abraham engages community members in Open Dances, a forum curated by Barak adé Soleil, resident choreographer for Rebuild Foundation, that offers opportunities for neighborhoods on the South Side to experience visiting and local movement-based artists. The focus of Kyle Abraham’s visit, “learn dance,” expands on the unique movement expression he articulates through a signature technique, opening it for different interpretations by different bodies who may not normally practice dance, but are invested in how their bodies move. The event is free and open to all ages.

Thanks to Meredith Dincolo and the staff of the Pre-Professional Programs at Hubbard Street Dance Chicago for connecting the community with Kyle Abraham earlier in the week through a master class hosted at Lou Conte Dance Studios.

The MCA gratefully acknowledges the generosity of the youth, Billy Brooks, and Waliy Eleim at the Better Boys Foundation and the community, Barak adé Soleil, and the Rebuild Foundation staff at Dorchester Art + Housing Collaborative in welcoming Kyle Abraham. Very special thanks to the students and their teacher Melinda Wilson at Curie Metropolitan High School, the students and their teachers Sarah Ford Thompson and Ted Seymour at Chicago High School for the Arts (CHiArts), and the students and their teacher Regina Beach at Rowe-Clark Math & Science Academy for engaging with Abraham.In.Motion company members and Kyle Abraham in dance classes and conversations.

Running time is one hour and twenty minutes, including a fifteen-minute intermission.

Generous support for MCA Dance is provided by David Herro and Jay Franke. Support for When the Wolves Came In is provided by Lois and Steve Eisen and the Eisen Family Foundation. When the Wolves Came In was commissioned and produced by New York Live Arts through its Resident Commissioned Artist Program, with lead support from the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation. When the Wolves Came In is supported in part by the New England Foundation for the Arts’ National Dance Project, with lead funding from the Doris Duke Charitable Foundation and the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation. The work was developed in part through a production residency at On the Boards with support from the National Dance Project and with funding from the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation. Support was also provided to New York Live Arts for the commissioning of this work by MAP Fund, a program of Creative Capital supported by the Doris Duke Charitable Foundation and the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation. Sets for When the Wolves Came In were donated by Glenn Ligon. This performance of When The Wolves Came In is supported in part by an award from the National Endowment for the Arts. intended for release in 1963 to mark the centennial of the Emancipation Proclamation, was released in the fall of 1960 due to the severity sparked by the sit-ins in Greensboro, NC, and the urgency of the growing civil rights movement in the United States and South Africa.

As overarching commentary: I keep going back to Roach’s response when asked about the song, “Freedom Day”: “Freedom itself was so hard to grasp . . . we don’t really understand what it really is to be free.” At this point in my life, I am very well aware of the freedoms I possess. But as a Black Gay American man, I am equally aware of my limitations and those that exist for so many in a polyphobic society of our current times.

I began working on When the Wolves Came In after a visit to the Hector Pieterson Museum in Soweto, South Africa. While there, I became fixated on the power of perception, and the ways that the thirteen-year-old Pieterson’s death in an anti-Apartheid protest shines a spotlight on questions of personal choice and collective rights in the struggle for freedom. For Michael Brown, Tyler Clementi, Eric Garner, Islan Nettles, and the countless other faceless and nameless women and men facing violence and discrimination, these questions still have terrible resonance.

Max Roach’s album timelessly tackles these very same issues and questions; his jazz work figures as an evaluation of rights perceived through his experience and expressed through his art. As a dance work, this program was created to live in a skin well aware of the cyclical hardships of our history, and the very present fear of an unknowable future.
