MARC BAMUTHI JOSEPH / THE LIVING WORD PROJECT

/peh-LO-tah/ — a futbol framed freedom suite . . .
SUPPORT FOR THE ARTISTS

/peh-LO-teh/ has been commissioned by the Kennedy Center for the Arts and the Museum of Contemporary Art Chicago. It is made possible with funding support by the New England Foundation for the Arts’ National Theater Project, with lead funding from the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation; The MAP Fund (a program of Creative Capital), supported by the Doris Duke Charitable Foundation and the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation; Panta Rhei Foundation; Wattis Foundation, the Zellerbach Family Foundation, East Bay Community Foundation, and the National Endowment for the Arts.

Critical developmental residencies have been supported by Southern Methodist University, Georgia Tech, Wesleyan University Center for the Arts and Museum of Contemporary Art, Chicago; Thanks to Clyde Voliten (SMU), Madison Carlo (Georgia Tech), Pamela Tegge and Barbara Ally (Wesleyan), and Peter Taub and Yolanda Cursach (MCA) for making this happen.

Support for the pilot of moving and passing in Harlem and the Bronx, New York, is funded by Guggenheim Social Practice, an initiative supported by the Edmond de Rothschild Foundations.

Marc Bamuthi Joseph is a participant in the Global Connections—ON the ROAD program, funded by The Andrew W. Mellon Foundation and administered by Theatre Communications Group, the national organization for the professional not-for-profit American Theatre. Marc Bamuthi Joseph wishes to thank the many individuals who contributed to the GoFundMe campaign to support this work. There are too many of you to list but you know who you are. Your support has meant more to me than you can know.

The company wishes to thank our ancestors, our families, and our professional colleagues for their inspiration.

This work is presented in association with the Chicago Humanities Festival.

The MCA supported the development of /peh-LO-teh/—a futbol framed freedom suite . . . through a New Works Initiative residency. In August 2016, Joseph and his collaborators held a ten-day development residency and an in-progress showing at the MCA’s Edlis Neeson Theater to assess the technical and design aspects of the project’s development and to shift the depth and tourability of his work.

FROM THE CURATORS

My long relationship with Marc Bamuthi Joseph, founder of the Living Word Project, has involved a process of learning to spot poetry and intention in movement. French poet Stéphane Mallarmé said: “You can’t make a poem with ideas . . . you make it with words.” I am inspired by Marc’s concrete examples of this in his many works staged at the MCA.

In 2006, he wrote and debuted Word Becomes Flesh at the museum. The choreopoem, in which he described a letter to his unborn son, was performed at the intersection of body politics, body language, and the body as pen. Word came on the heels of another spoken-word piece, Scourge Remix, written in collaboration with teen authors whom he mentors as part of his organization Youth Speaks, the pride of the artist. Scourge was performed in 2006 at my first poetry-based festival for the MCA, which also featured dance and live music. In his next intermedia piece at the museum, the break/s: a mixtape for stage (2009), Marc tested conventions for speaking about race, masculinity, class, and cultural difference. His first work commissioned by the MCA, red, black & GREEN: a blues (2012)—also his first collaboration with Chicago-based artist Theaster Gates—addressed environmental issues from the perspective of communities of color. In preparation, they literally and figuratively harvested material for the project over several years in interviews and community events in Chicago, Houston, Oakland, and New York, a process Marc began during his residency for the break/s at the MCA.

The Living Word Project not only brings performers, sculptors, choreographers, and media designers into the conversation but also promotes effective collaboration by insisting on a process in which, Marc describes, “everyone involved grows by the exponent of collective investment.”

Thanks to the MCA’s history with Marc, I have come to see how changes in understanding and in experience are related. He continues to push new experiences, focusing on the flux of life instead of trying to recapture something known. And so, we meet him where ideas become public—what we see on the stage is not merely movement but the embodiment of intention.

ABOUT THE WORK

In my first memory of the game, we are running barefoot, uphill, on limestone. Baby Doc Duvalier is chillin’ in a mansion in the distance, but here, every boy on my grandpa’s block is chasing a tennis ball bandaged in loose socks, passing it with our feet. NYC kid visiting for the summer, USA kid in the hemisphere’s poorest country, only time I fit in with the rest is inside of the game. My love of soccer is a heritage story...

From childhood through the recent past, I’ve been growing toward this new work...

As my questions have deepened and grown more emotionally charged, I’ve charted a path of inquiry that connects macro issues of economy to personal confrontations with my own body as a positioned figure in the languages of sport and art. This path has taken me to South Africa, Brazil, soccer capitals across Europe, local leagues across the US, moving forward on a hypothesis that links local and global economic hierarchies to behaviors, allegiances, and government investment in the infrastructure of the world’s game. My plan is to draw concurrent narrative maps through this research leading to the writing and dramaturgy of a new work.

/peh-LO-teh/ explores the ecology of egalitarianism played out inside the world’s game. It is a story of my body in its late summer years; the physics of a globally networked economy running in tandem with the fragile network of a dancer’s anatomy. It is a bet that sweat has currency to transition both narrative point of view and visual dimension. For my company of collaborators, it is a structural experiment: physically demanding, visually deft, viscerally reaching, and linguistically twisted in hip-hop and hope.

Ultimately, I’m intrigued by the elusive riddle of equality and am fascinated by the curiosity that soccer is the only thing the entire planet can agree to do together. It is the official sport of this spinning ball. My inquiry involves the joy of the game against the complexity of the global sites of the last two World Cups. It acknowledges that all conversations tied to ecology are ALSO tied to democracy and economy. The work is sprung from the bliss of a goal scorer’s run; it shares what his countrymen do after the ball beats the goalie, the closest thing going to freedom...

The audience is invited to a conversation with the artists, Marc Bamuthi Joseph, Yaw Agyeman, Amara Tabor-Smith, and Traci Tolmaire, directly after the performance. The conversation is moderated by MCA Curator of Performance Yolanda Cesta Cursach.

SPORTS AND BELIEF WITH MARC BAMUTHI JOSEPH
Sat, Nov 4, 6–7 pm
In partnership with the Chicago Humanities Festival

Marc Bamuthi Joseph returns to Chicago to discuss the connection between sports, politics, and belief and how teamwork or group movement can be a bridge for discussing immigration, international diplomacy, and global economies. In conversation with his long-time friend and fellow poet, Roger Bonair-Agard. This program is ticketed.

ABOUT THE ARTISTS

THE LIVING WORD PROJECT (LWP) was formerly the resident theater company of Youth Speaks, Inc. of San Francisco. Now operating independently, LWP is committed to producing literary performance in the verse of our time. Aesthetically urban, pedagogically Freirean, LWP derives personal performed narratives out of interdisciplinary collaboration. Though its methodology includes dance, music, and film, the company’s emphasis is spoken storytelling. LWP creates verse-based works spoken through the body, illustrated by visual and sonic scores, and in communication with important social issues and movements of the immediate moment. LWP is the theater’s connection from Shakespeare’s quill to Kool Herc’s turntables; from Martha Graham’s cupped hand to Nelson Mandela’s clenched fist: a new voice for a new politic.

MARC BAMUTHI JOSEPH is an inaugural recipient of both the United States Artists Rockefeller Fellowship and the Doris Duke Performing Artist Award, and winner of the 2011 Alpert Award in Theater. He’s served as an advisor and panelist for the Rockefeller MAP Fund, the PEW Charitable Trust, and the Zellerbach Family Fund, among other national philanthropies. He is the founding program director of the exemplary non-profit Youth Speaks and a cofounder of Life is Living, a national series of one-day festivals designed to activate under-resourced parks through hip-hop, art, and focused environmental action. Joseph recently premiered the Creative Time commission Black Joy in the Hour of Chaos in New York’s Central Park and completed a new work with Bill T. Jones for the Opera Philadelphia. He serves as Chief of Program and Pedagogy at YBCA in San Francisco.

MICHAEL JOHN GARCÉS (DIRECTOR) previous work with the Living Word Project includes directing red, black & GREEN: a blues and the break/s. He is artistic director of Los Angeles’s Cornerstone Theater Company where recent directing projects include Urban Rez by Larissa FastHorse, California: The Tempest by Alison Carey, and Plumas Negras by Juliette Carrillo, as well as writing Magic Fruit and Los Illegals. Directing credits include Wrestling Jerusalem by Aaron Davidman, District Merchants by Aaron Posner (The Folger Theatre), and The Box by Sarah Shourd (Z Space). He is a member of Woolly Mammoth Theater Company, where he has helmed Lights Rise on Grace by Chad Bekim and The Convert by Danai Gurira. Garcés is the recipient of the Princess Grace Statue and the Alan Schneider Director Award.

STACEY PRINTZ (CHOREOGRAPHER) is the artistic director of Printz Dance Project and a Bay Area–based choreographer, dancer and educator. She graduated Cum Laude from UC Irvine with degrees in sociology and dance. Printz teaches for A.C.T.’s MFA program and at Alonzo King’s LINES Dance Center where she has been on faculty for fifteen years. She has taught her hybrid contemporary-jazz technique across the United States and in Europe. Her company has performed in San Francisco for fifteen years and has toured internationally. Reviewers of her show Hover Space considered it “a slam dunk” with its “talented cast, unique concept, and inventive movement.” Printz has also choreographed Aaron Davidman’s Wrestling Jerusalem, Sarah Shourd’s The Box, and Marc Bamuthi Joseph’s Scourge, the break/s, and red, black & GREEN: a blues.

DAVID SZLASA (SCENIC AND VIDEO DESIGN) is a video artist and designer spanning performance, installation, public art, and social practice. His work revolves around ideas of remix and reappropriation, using popular imagery, ideas, and actions in unexpected ways to challenge structures of authority and question social standards. His project Studio 1 was dubbed a Living Innovation Zone by the City of San Francisco, and he has taught design at Stanford, NYU, and St. Mary’s College.
