MUSEUM OF CONTEMPORARY ART
CHICAGO
Celebrate black creativity with music and dance that transform expectations.

FROM THE CURATOR

What would it sound like to map the influences, choices, and experiments within an artist’s creative process? In 2017, Thurman Barker wrote his first orchestral piece, an ode to the music he grew up playing in Chicago, including with AACM founder Muhal Richard Abrams. It’s also an homage to the long history of Chicago’s black communities and jazz music. Tonight, Thurman shares some of the part-scored, part-improvised result—South Side Suite—in quintet form. After his own recent homage to Abrams, “Muhal,” Ben LaMar Gay also embarks on a new format; his work-in-progress Hecky Naw! Angles! joins music, video, and choreography to reverently rearticulate the rhythmic structures of the popular music that shaped the Chicago black social and line dances he grew up with. Together, these compositions connect across the history and future of music experimentation and across the city itself. Thurman has eagerly awaited this Chicago homecoming, alongside a next-generation AACM artist like Ben. Some “backyard barbecue knowledge,” as Ben calls it, will surely be shared tonight.

Tonight concludes our series of performances, developed within the MCA’s New Works Initiative, that speak to and about Chicago, transform familiar forms into something new, and alter our expectations of what black performance can be. Thank you for helping us support performance that conscientiously engages with this city’s artists, histories, and ideas.

ABOUT THE WORK

“When I came up in the late 1950s and 60s, the South Side was a thriving community with a middle class and folks of color were buying homes. . . . When I look at the history of it, well, Chicago has always been a very rich musical city since the 1920s. . . . South Side Suite [is] my way of honoring [that history].”

—Thurman Barker

“I’m thinking about line dances, with these cats calling out the dance moves. You get lost in those callings and those words . . . the Black fiddler used to make those calls for everybody’s dance and these musicians used to travel. It’s all connected.”

—Ben LaMar Gay

About the artists

Thurman Barker

South Side Suite

Thurman Barker (Composition/Drums) is a world-renowned drummer and percussionist as well as a composer and professor. His professional career has spanned decades and his talent is so extensive that it encompasses and crosses over into many musical genres including, but not limited to, jazz, blues, contemporary, and classical. His percussion performances are forces to be reckoned with that cannot, and should not, be pigeonholed by anything as limiting as a label. He was the house drummer at the Shubert Theatre for ten years and has played behind the likes of Bette Midler, Marvin Gaye, Billy Eckstine, Vikki Carr, and blues legend Mighty Joe Young. He was a founding member of the Association for the Advancement of Creative Musicians (AACM) and is a member of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers. He has five recordings under his own label, Uptee Productions, and has recorded as a sideman on fifty albums.

Noah Barker (Piano) hails from Jefferso...
ABOUT THE ARTISTS

“The History of Jazz in the 1001 Best Albums.” He has received international critical acclaim for his work leading various ensemble formations and the groundbreaking String Trio of New York, which he co-founded in 1978. A Guggenheim Fellow, Emery has performed and recorded with Henry Threadgill, Steve Reich, Wadada Leo Smith, Anthony Braxton, Klook, the Human Arts Ensemble, and others. As a composer, he has written pieces for chamber groups, jazz ensembles, solo guitar, and symphony orchestra.

DEAN TORREY (Double bass) was born in Connecticut in 1992 and took up the bass at age eight. During his college years he was a student of bassists Doug Weiss, Scott Colley, Lynn Seaton, Joe Sanders, and Bach specialist Jeff Bradetic, as well as pianist Hal Galper (who would go on to hire Torrey for his own quartet). Since moving to New York in 2014, Torrey has quickly distinguished himself through leading voices on bass of his generation, having been tapped for sideman work by veteran creatives such as NEA Jazz Master Muhal Richard Abrams, AACM percussion/composer Thurmin Baker, Rodney Green, Francisco Mela, and Dizzy Gillespie alumnus Ed Cherry; as well as contemporaries closer to his own age like Tivon Pennicott, Micah Thomas, Immanuel Wilkins, Joel Ross, Adam O’Farrill, Jure Pukl, and the widely acclaimed Onyx Collective, among others.

BEN LAMAR GAY (Composition/Concept/Performer) is a composer and occasional vocalist with ground-breaking elements of sound, color, and space through folkloric filters to produce brilliant electroacoustic collages. The Chicago native’s true technique is giving life to an idea while expanding and exploring into the term Americana. Inspired by the vibrant experimental music scene of Chicago, and a three-year residency in Brazil, Gay collaborates with some influential figures in the world of music, dance, and visual arts including George Lewis, Itibere Zwarq, Onye Ozuzu, Gudus Onikeku, Nicole Mitchell, Jeff Parker, Catherine Sullivan, Mike Reed, Joshua Abrams, Celso Fonseca, Tomoko Reed, The Black Monks of Mississippi, Bixiga 70, and AACM.

His musical influences derive from his collection of experiences in all of the Americas and the gathered data channeled by his amplifying accessibility. Embracing international vision while remaining true to his roots, Gay’s creative output aligns with the honest notion that he only knows how to be a man from the South Side of Chicago.

KIM ALPERT (Video/Projection) combines analog and digital technologies, movement, music, and interactivity to create sculptural and performative systems. Alpert’s visual practice centers on her humanism and inquisitions into psychology and spirituality—understanding and translating the impact of visual language to create meaning and peace. Alpert uses synthesis, feedback, and found footage to weave dream tapestries both recorded and improvised. A significant part of Alpert’s performed work is in collaboration with improvisational musicians, blending pre-rendered content with live visualizations. She performs in collaborative and cross-disciplinary works such as Mike Reed’s Flesh and Bone, The Instigation Orchestra, and her own project Scan Lines. Her interactive room, Bodyphonic, a gesture-driven instrument and longitudinal sound visualizer, is on permanent display at the National Music Center of Canada.

Baker was involved in starting more than twenty cutting-edge new music ensembles including the Mantra Blue Free Orchestra (Chicago), PEK Contemporary Project (Berlin), and the Blueblue Walkers/Bass Kollektiv Ensemble. He received two thousand traditionally noted contemporary and classical works that range in genre from classical to jazz. She has received commissions from the Chicago Sinfonietta, Berlin International Jazz Days, the American Ballet Chamber Series, University of Chicago Film Studies Center, Indiana University Black Film Center, and Brandeis University, among others. Baker is the artistic consultant for the Chicago Symphony Orchestra’s African American Network among many other classically oriented organizations.

The Chicago Reader calls KATIE ERNST (Bass/Vocals) “one of the brightest lights on the Chicago jazz scene.” The Chicago Tribune calls her “a versatile young bassist who plays in far-flung bands and sings with uncommon delicacy.” Ernst’s creative projects include a Dorothy Parker poetry project, Little Words, which premiered in 2014 at the Kennedy Center in Washington DC, a duo of folk/hymns/improvised music called Wayfaring, and an indie jazz trio Twin Talk, which recently released their third studio album on PEOPLE, a streaming music platform created by members of Bon Iver and The National.

ROB FRYE ( Alto flute/ Bike wheel/ Vocals) is a multi-instrumentalist living in Chicago since 2006. In 2010 he began to collaborate on projects that travels on two wheels throughout the United States and abroad, amplifying bike-tire beats through a solar-powered sound system. His recording and touring for the last several years with jazz and experimental groups has been complemented by three seasons conducting bird surveys for the Institute for Bird Populations in California and four summers working for the Chicago’s Project for Human-Centric Mobile Recording Studio. The Hideout has called him “a constant collaborator who is able to give a unique voice in a variety of ensembles.”

RAQUEL MONROE, PHD (Choreography/Movement) has been an avid social dancer most of her life, which led her to the classroom to study concert dance forms. Ironically, this project brings her full circle to the dance floor, as both an object of study and enjoyment. A Chicago resident for ten years, her first attempt at learning step five years ago exposed her to the depth of urban line dancing in the city, and this project provides deeper access to Black Chicago. Monroe performs with the Propelled Animals creating immersive, interdisciplinary performance installations. She is an associate professor of dance and the Co-director of Academic Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion at Columbia College Chicago.

CARLOS PRIDE (Talking drum/Gung Gong) grew up in the musical home of the South Side of Chicago where his passion for music began with a guitar and a pair of bongos. As a teenager he studied drums with Fred White of Earth, Wind & Fire and founded the Chicago Suwannee Movement of the Art Ensemble of Chicago. Getting his professional start in Chicago’s blues and jazz clubs, Pride has shared the stage with J. W. Williams, Valerie Wellington, the late Lefty Dizz, and Buddy Guy. In the early 1980s Pride was a member of the Imports Etc. record pool along with Frankie Knuckles who taught him to splice tape and create music for the Chicago dance music community. And in the world of dance music. As a student at the American Conservatory of Music, Pride studied with Ghanaian master drummer, Midawo Gideon Foli, who introduced him to the Talking drum. Pride founded his own ensemble, Rhythm Testament, and has performed professionally with many artists, including Talking Drum master Rosaki Aladotun (King Sunny Ade), saxophonist Ari Brown, N’Dea Davenport of the Brand New Heavies, George Clinton, Meshell Ndegeocello, The Indigo Girls, Sinead O’Connor, Natalie Merchant, and Talib Kweli.
UPCOMING PERFORMANCES

Sat–Sun, Sep 14–15 and 21–22, Noon, 3 pm, 7 pm, and 8 pm

THE STOREFRONT PROJECT

What happens when you ask six artists to make shows from scratch, without a rulebook or script, performed back-to-back in spaces across the city? Over two weekends, directors Dado Gyure, Lucky Stiff, Denise Yvette Serna, Coya Paz, Sydney Chatman, and Mikael Burke with April Cleveland demonstrate Chicago theater’s uncanny ability to pop up anywhere.

For performance dates and locations, visit mcachicago.org/stage.
