FROM THE CURATOR

In the past year, many generations of racial, economic, and cultural violences came thundering into the public eye. At the historic 2021 United States presidential inauguration, the words of poet Amanda Gorman’s ringing performance lingered in many of our minds (and on our social media streams): “And so we lift our gazes not to what stands between us / but what stands before us.” But to what extent do connection and shared goals require dissent and disagreement? If performance is adept at blurring fiction and reality, creators David Neumann, Marcella Murray, and Tei Blow take it one step further. Together they imagine (virtual) theater as a place to experience difficult dialogues with complexity—and uncertainty.

Primer is theater as conversation, conversation as theater. Just as COVID-19 has demanded new ways of communicating, with this newly commissioned work the artists ask one another (and their audience) to experience each other—sometimes with discomfort—through the screen. The “social distancing” here is both spatial and political, and ultimately for the good of everyone.

This event itself blurs formats: it is our first time presenting a performance as a Dialogue Series conversation and our first time doing a fully virtual, livestreamed theatrical production. I’m thrilled that Chicago’s own Mikki Kendall, brilliant Black feminist author, advocate, and thinker, will join the artists in their productive uncertainty. As Gorman recited, this society is not broken, “but simply unfinished.”

ABOUT THE WORK

“Primer for an Impossible Conversation is an articulation of two people’s desire to walk through fraught territories, and try to undo, even a little, what sustains our unjust system. As we imagine spaces beyond earth, we wonder if we’re able to undo the patterns of thought we’ve inherited.

When we made Distances Smaller Than This Are Not Confirmed for the stage last year, Marcella asked: “What DO Black folks get out of this sort of thing besides teaching someone else something fundamental...again?”

— David Neumann

“I still cannot answer that question fully. The hope is to always create less suffering.

However, I do find myself learning more about how I have internalized the current systems and expectations. I am unable to accept the imbalances with the same unawareness that I once did. As we work, the cost of it becomes clearer and makes obvious what must change.

We have found ourselves in a place where I get to explore the question of what I would do when we intentionally center my perspective. Which is new.”

— Marcella Murray

Performances include: The Slow Room, a piece directed by Anne Dorsen at Performance Space New York; a workshop of Ocean Filibuster, which was co-created by the team PearlAmour (Lisa D’Amour and Katie Pearl) with composer Sxip Shirey at Abrons Arts Center; I Don’t Want to Interrupt You Guys, which was created in collaboration with Leonie Bell and HYUNG-SEOK JEON during RAP at Mabou Mines; New Many, created by Maria Camila at Dixon Place and Shoot Don’t Talk at St. Ann’s Warehouse/Puppet Lab, created by Andrew Murdock. Not Confirmed (Obie award-winning), I Understand Everything Better (Bessie award-winning), and Big Eater. ABG makes work that is at its core an irrational response to our perceived place in the universe. ABG makes pieces from scratch, bringing to word, action, and proximity a delighted embrace of our contradictory lives. Words and actions can only point to experience. The collection of artists actively attempts to create experiences that are difficult to describe. ABG’s most recent work, Distances Smaller Than This Are Not Confirmed, premiered in January 2020, cocreated by David Neumann and Marcella Murray, cocommissioned and copresented by Abrons Arts Center and The Chocolate Factory Theater, and associate-produced by Mabou Mines.

DIALOGUE SERIES 2021: DISSENT
This presentation marks the start of the MCA’s 2021 Dialogue Series, a museum-wide commitment to sustained inquiry about museum practice, equity, and inclusion.

The annual series includes eminent speakers presenting innovative, cross-disciplinary work, panel discussions, and opportunities for open dialogue between local arts professionals and audiences. This year we focus on the topic of dissent and how pushing against existing structures strengthens our social bonds. We’ll consider how we talk with each other, nurture each other, call each other out, and ask more of each other and the structures around us.
